Tom Hanlon

As I knew him
by Ejnar Fink-Jensen

Tom and I spent quite some time together. We had car-trips - lunches - meetings - visits to his house. And what always impressed me was his honesty - integrity - curiosity and impulsiveness.

One day when I was driving I noticed that he was studying me. I asked him what was going on and he said:” Ejnar how old are you.” I told him that we were more or less the same age. He hesitated a little and said: “You look so much younger - it is because you are Danish and Danish children grow up eating fish - and fish keeps you young.” End of discussion.

Another time I complimented him on his hand writing. He had a beautiful hand writing :

He told me that the nuns taught him to read - write - and study. They did not give up on him until he had a hand writing that was completely correct. He could remember the names of all the sisters, so there is no doubt that they helped forming him - taught him certain principles - and actually never left him.

He also liked to talk about religious matters with me. He had his ideas and asked me many questions. Of course I shall not go into details, because these matters are personal, but he always ended up by saying;” I still have questions - and when I stand before God I am going to ask Him for answers.

And now - dear Tom - you are before God - and I am certain that He has answered them all. “Rest in peace - my friend.” - Ejnar
